ECONOMY

Wrangell's economy, while historically based on the wood products and fishing industries, is now driven by tourism and marine industries.

Fishing and fish processing are a very important segment of the local economy. Fleets of shrimp, crab, troll, seine, gillnet, and trawler vessels are based in Wrangell. There are two seafood processors and a crab processor. The community has completed several marine industry enhancement projects, including the recent completion of a marine service and repair yard with two travel lifts to support the commercial and recreational boats transiting the Inside Passage.

Independent visitor tourism plays a major role during the summer months from May through September. Wrangell's Downtown Revitalization project to rebuild infrastructure and enhance the downtown commercial corridor is recently completed. The local Tlingit tribe completed reconstruction of Chief Shakes Tribal House. Fishing, hiking, museum, sightseeing, flightseeing and wildlife charters, petroglyphs and local art are available for independent travelers arriving by ferry or jet, yachts and cruise ship passengers.

Public sector employment is also a significant contributor to the local economy. This includes employees of the City and Borough of Wrangell, Wrangell School District, Wrangell Medical Center, local employees of state agencies including Health and Social Services, Fish and Game, Transportation and Public Safety; and local federal employees of the Postal Service, Customs and US Forest Service.
